Dear Shito Ryu Karate friends,

Due to the Corona 19 virus pandemic, we had to cancel our 1st Championships in 2020. We are optimistic and we hope that virologists deal with the Corona 19 pandemic in 2021 and that we will be able to hold our 1st Championships. The venue remains unchanged, a novelty of the program is the inclusion of competitions in Kobudo specifically Bo for age categories over 16 years.

I hope that we will together celebrate our sporting activities in the Slovakia.

Enjoy these days of karate sport in our facilities which we will place at your disposal and which we hope will fulfill your expectations.

Thank you for coming to Trenčín, Slovakia and wishing good luck to the participants.

Peter Baďura
President of SSHRKA

Town of Trenčín, together with Nitra and Bratislava, belongs to the three oldest towns in Slovakia, which have been mentioned in chronicles as early as the 11th century. Its strategically key position close to the three Carpathian passes at the crossroads of the trade routes has always made it an important support point and the right center of the entire Central Považie.

The oldest archaeological findings prove the presence of man in Trenčín and its surroundings in 200,000 years ago. The ancient settlement is represented by the locality of the Hungarian culture from the 2nd millennium ahead. I. from the Early Bronze Age on the Castle Rock and the Remains of the Lusatian Culture of the Late Bronze Age from the Turn of the 2nd and 1st Millennium BC on the castle rock and in the adjacent part of Brezina. In the same locality, archaeological research also revealed the remains of the settlement of the people of Púchov culture from the Iron Age. In the 2nd and 1st centuries, there was a fortified settlement and commercial center from the late Latén, whose Celtic population maintained business relations with the Celts on the Middle Danube, as evidenced by the finding of the Celtic gold coin Athena Alknis and two silver tetradrachms of the type Batsky Bratislava .

In the centuries before the arrival of the Celts, one of the branches of the famous Amber Road, through which the Etruscans, Greek and later Roman merchants from the Mediterranean region to the Baltic region traveled through the Vlára Pass and through the Morava River Basin. From the north they brought precious amber, for which they paid for luxury products of antique craftsmen and wine.
ROMAN SIGNS on the castle rock - birth certificate of the town

At the turn of our era, the Celts pushed out Germanic tribes coming to the territory of western Slovakia from the north and west. The most famous of them were the Quads, who, along with Markomans, based in neighboring South Moravia, led frequent struggles with the legions of the Roman Empire. The most significant clash of both opponents occurred at the time of so-called. The Marcomanni wars when the II. The help of the Legion got to the area of Trenčín, where it was overwintered at the turn of the years 179 - 80.

This event is reminiscent of the well-known Roman inscription on the castle rock that advises Trenčín to an exclusive group of European cities with an ancient past. It should be recalled that the most important Greek geographer, cartographer and polyhistorist Klaudios Ptolemy (90-168) presents Leukaristos behind the Danube in his Geographer, which is most likely identical to Laugarici and thus to Trenčinn. More information: Laugaricio - Trenčin and surroundings in Roman times First written sources about the city

The founding document of the Prague Bishopric of 1086 mentions the province of Vag in the Central Považie. Given the time of the founding of the bishopric in the last third of the 10th century, it is likely that the Trenčín Castle was already the seat of this province at the end of the 10th and early 11th centuries. However, the oldest written mention of the Trenčín Castle is already in a more precise undated report in the Hungarian gestures. It binds to the year 1067, when the fighting between the Hungarian king Solomon and the Czech principality took place. Indirect evidence of the existence of Trenčín is also mention in the so-called. Mauro's legend before 1074, dealing with the hermits of st. Benedict and Svorad, who lived in the 11th century at Skalka near Trenčín.

Kozmas Chronicle of Chekhov mentions that in 1091 the Czech prince son Bretislav went to his country, Bán (Bánovce, Bánov) near the castle of Trenčín in front of his father, Prince Vratislav.

Trenčín itself is mentioned in the so-called. Zoborské documents from the years 1111 and 1113 as a toll and market settlement under the Trenčín castle. In spite of the Hungarian occupation, it seems that the Slavic nobility maintained its origins in the surroundings of Trenčín. In 1241, there was mentioned Trenčín's robe Bogomer (Bohumir), who led the defense of the Trenčín castle against the Tatars. The Tartar invasion, which in this and the following year depopulated a significant part of Hungary, was directed by the Vlársky Pass in one stream from northern Moravia to Trenčín at the end of April. Podhradská settlement was apparently destroyed, but the castle itself, at that time certainly at least part of the stone, resisted the attack.

Trenčín in the period of Matus Čák. Trenčín also gained the right to enclose walls. The 15th century town fortification, consisting of a simple fortification belt with two gates, followed the fortification of the castle and, together with the fortified parish church, the so-called. Marienburg, it formed a unified comprehensive fortification system.

History of the Free Royal Town

In 1412, the Emperor and King of Hungary, Sigismund of Luxembourg, granted the status of a free royal town with the rights of Buda and Szekesfehervar. The town ranked among the most important cities of the Kingdom of Hungary.

In the middle of May 1528, the castle of Trenčín was besieged by Ferdinand I of Habsburg under the command of General Johan Katzianer as the most important stronghold of the defaulter John Zápoľský. On June 28, the castle surrendered. The city was already burned out, looted and devastated. The city walls were also damaged. After their repair in 1543, the municipal municipality approached the two city gates. In particular, the Lower "Turkish" gate was reinforced by a semi-circular barbican with a smaller tower.

The parish church and chapel (karnier) st. Michala. However, the destroyed Franciscan church behind the walls in the suburbs was not repaired even though its walls were standing until 1596. It shows the first known view of Trenčín, the vista of the city from 1580.

Worries were not unnecessary, as it was shown in 1599, when the plundering hordes of Crimean Tatars in the service of the Ottoman Sultan got to Trenčín and devastated the wider surroundings. In 1604, however, the city did not pass fate, and Bočkaji hajdúš made terrible damage to it. They were then joined by the tense relations of the city council to the new castle lord Štefan Ilešház, accompanied by mutual trouble and wickedness. The catastrophe was repeated less than 20 years later when the looting troops of Gabriela Bethlen seized Trenčín. And in order not to be enough, the city was hit by a flood in 1625. In 1644-1645, Trenčín was again threatened by rebel troops of Juraj I. Rákoci. The plague killed more than 300 inhabitants in 1656. The re-invasion of the Ottoman troops hit the central

Považie in 1663. While attacking the city on October 2, the Turks did not smash the castle, but they burned the suburbs and more than 300 burgesses and soldiers of the castle garrison fell in the defense of the city, others were dragged into slavery and burned 17 villages. 15 years later (1678-1683) Imrich Tököli troops ravaged the surroundings of Trenčín. The last, but the biggest, disaster affected Trenčín during the reign of František II. Rákociho. Although the Kuruc troops did not acquire the castle, but on 14 February 1704 they occupied the town below. Although soon they were forced to withdraw on May 2, the blockade lasted for four years. The famine and the disease raged and, in addition, on May 14, 1708, a catastrophic fire broke out that destroyed or seriously damaged 195 homes, the Piarist Church, and the city fortifications that had not been repaired.
